BYRD NOT TO BE STAMPEDED INTO A PREMATURE HOP-OFF

Flier Says He Will Wait Until Weather Is Right Before Starting

PURPOSE IS SCIENTIFIC
Wants To Establish Standard Conditions of Trans-Atlantic Flying

By James L. Killgallen
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., June 27.—Commander Richard E. Byrd is not going to be stampeded into a premature hop-off for Paris in the monoplane America, thus defeating the scientifically aimed of his repeatedly delayed expedition. That object is among other things, to establish standard conditions of trans-Atlantic flying in co-operation with the United States Weather Bureau.

Byrd will take off just as soon as the Weather Bureau conditions are satisfactory and "not until then," he asserted firmly today.

"Let's go," has been the plea of at least two members of the expedition of four, but Byrd, actuated by the scientific factor involved and the added fact that he holds the lives of three men in his hands, has replied, "No, no, not yet." Every man in the expedition is loyal to Byrd, and have the utmost confidence in him. Two of them, Bert Acosta, the nervy, black-haired black-eyed pilot, and Bert Balchen, the blonde, blue-eyed Norwegian relief man, would jump off under any conditions just for the love of it. But, eager as they are to get away they respect Byrd's calm judgment and self-control.

Byrd, who four times has been cited for bravery and who had the daring to fly to the North Pole, is courageous almost beyond belief, but he refuses to lose sight of the aim of the expedition.

If he was to disregard the advice of the weather experts in this flight, he would be violating one of the first principles it is hoped to establish to future flying of the oceans, the principle of obtaining and accepting government co-operation in commercial flying.

"Since Col. Lindbergh's return to the United States, we have been awaiting the word of the United States Weather Bureau that has never been given. Just as soon as that word is given we will go, and not until then."

MOTOR BUREAU CHECKS MAILING LIST OF OWNERS

Address Changes Must Be In Bureau Not Later Than July 15th

OTHER STATE NEWS

HARRISBURG, Pa., June 27 (I.N.S.)—The Bureau of Motor Vehicles today began checking its files in preparation for the mailing of nearly four million renewal applications to automobile owners and operators.

Address changes must be in the bureau not later than July 15 to insure receipt of the application form which the department mails. Failure to secure the application form promptly usually results in delay in obtaining license plates. The department furnishes a form for such changes.

Benjamin G. Eynon, the registrar, asked that persons who both own and operate motor vehicles include the license number of the car as well as the operator's license number. Bureau employees in their checking of applicants have found many mistakes in the mailing of title numbers. This number is found on the owner's license card at the extreme right and under the numerals which indicate the horse power or chassis weight.

Applications will not be mailed to those who did not hold licenses during 1927 but under the new motor code, effective January 1, operators may obtain a license without examination if they have proof of having had one within the previous three years.

LEWISTOWN, Pa., June 27 (I.N.S.)—Isaac, the woodchuck, is in the limelight again.

Isaac, who gained fame as Pennsylvania's only four-footed political prophet when he refused to grant an audience with former Governor Gifford Pinchot, thereby putting the jinx a pinchot's candidacy for U. S. Senate, has left his burrow under the kitchen of a local tea room. This time he little animal engaged a group of boys in battle.

Isaac fled in a hail of stones.

HARRISBURG, June 27 (I.N.S.)—Deaths from homicides reached an unusually high rate while those from suicide decreased in the State during March, complete reports compiled and announced today by the bureau of statistics of the department of health revealed.

During the month there were 45 homicides and 59 deaths from suicide. In Pittsburgh the usual ratio of most two to one was reversed. Eight homicides and four suicides were reported.

Deaths from alcoholism increased 3 per cent. over the rate a year ago, a total of 41 being reported. Of the total, ten were reported from Pittsburgh. Officials admit that the total reported often is below the actual figure because of the unwillingness of the average physician to attribute death to that cause.

Seven persons perished from "excessive cold" during the month. Fourteen were drowned and sixteen died in conflagrations.

For the nineteenth consecutive month there were no deaths from mail pox in the State. This is attributed to almost universal vaccination.

The department cites the smallpox record in comparison with deaths from diphtheria, which numbered 77, "practically all of these, the department says, could have been prevented by proper immunization. Names of the thirteen cities where deaths from diphtheria occurred were posted in the department's bulletin.

Tuberculosis continued its marked downward trend, reaching the lowest March rate known in Pennsylvania.

The general death rate for the entire State in automobile accidents established a new record for March, autos taking a toll of 120 lives.

DANVILLE, Pa., June 27 (I.N.S.)—While the world acclaim Clarence Chamberlin and Charles Levine for their New York to Germany trans-Atlantic flight, Lloyd Bertaud, who was to have been the co-pilot with Chamberlin in the Bellanca monoplane Columbia, is back in the regular air mail service. Bertaud is well known here among citizens who follow the fortunes of the many pilots who touch Danville in their New York to Cleveland flight.

There was a touch of irony in the first flight Bertaud took after rejoining the service, following his dispute with Levine. Bertaud carried pictures and films of Col. Charles Lindbergh's safe arrival in Paris on a trip similar to that which Bertaud had planned to take.

Time For Inventory

There is a certain period of the day when every family takes inventory of its needs. It is the hour when all members of the family are at home. That hour is in the EVENING.

During the day, from early morning until sunset, the various members of the household are scattered. To reassemble them before the appointed hour for home-coming would be a gigantic task. The man who wishes to meet the entire family must wait until EVENING, when all footsteps point HOMEWARD.

At inventory time—in the EVENING—the family takes stock, discovers its needs, plans for supplying them. Inventory time in the home is the ideal hour for your merchandise to be laid before the family, and the best way—the ONLY way—is to secure the services of the newspaper that reaches home at inventory time.

The EVENING newspaper is a doubly welcome arrival because it contains information which will assist the entire family in planning its investments to be made tomorrow. Shopping lists will be compiled from the advertisements in the evening newspaper, and every advertisement will be read carefully. People no longer shop in haphazard fashion.

Unless YOUR advertisement is read, it will sell no merchandise. Make sure that it is READ by placing it in the EVENING newspaper, the newspaper that reaches home just before INVENTORY TIME and is an INDISPENSABLE aid to every member of the family.

The Courier is an EVENING NEWSPAPER.

REMOVE FORMS OF CANAL BRIDGE SPAN; WORK BEING PUSHED

Approaches To Be Beautified By Adjacent Property Owners

RELOCATE R. R. TRACKS

Buckley Street Has Been Completely Rebuilt By Borough

The numerous municipal improvements being pushed here while the weather is favorable, are rapidly nearing completion.

Street and Highway Committee has completed the rebuilding of Buckley street and this highway is now open to traffic throughout its entire length. The surface of the street has been completely rebuilt according to the penetration method.

Work on the bridge spanning the canal at Beaver street is being pushed with vigor. Yesterday water was drained from the canal and the wooden forms were removed from the arch span. The span was poured about 28 days ago.

Both the T. L. Leedom Carpet Mills and the D. Landreth Seed Company are removing old buildings and plan to further beautify their grounds adjacent to the approach of the bridge. This will do much to improve the appearance of the bridge and its surroundings.

The P. R. R. Co. has started the relocation of sidings so that the one siding, running along the canal mill property on Canal street, can be removed entirely.

The siding now running into the yard of Peirce & Williams will be continued through into the property of the D. Landreth Seed Company.

Borough workmen are rounding the corners at Beaver and Buckley streets and otherwise improving the approach to the span on this side.

Speed Exhibition Will Be Given At Langhorne

LANGHORNE, June 27—Champions, recognized and unrecognized, are due to exhibit their speed and driving skill on the afternoon of July 4 in what promises to be the best auto race meet ever held at the Langhorne Speedway, Langhorne, Pa., located just beyond Philadelphia on the Lincoln Highway to Trenton and New York.

Ira Vail, champion dirt-track driver in the eyes of the American Automobile Association, governing body of the auto sport, will pit his ability against Jimmy Gleason, heretofore considered the kingpin of the unsanctioned pilots but now in good standing. Titular reputations will be at stake when they face each other.

Vail's signed entry already has been received. He will sit at the wheel of a Miller Special, a car formerly owned and driven by Frank Lockhart, an Indianapolis Speedway winner.

The spectacular Gleason has given assurance he will be on hand, and it is expected that Frank Farmer, Ray Keech, Fred Winnall, Tom Dawson and Russell Snowberg, all former outlaw drivers with Gleason from the Philadelphia district but now in the good graces of the A. A. A., will be present on the Fourth at the Speedway, a track with which they are quite familiar.

In addition there is a strong possibility that Ralph De Palma, famous veteran of speedway and dirt tracks, may also compete at Langhorne. He is uncertain as to whether he will race at Kalamazoo or Langhorne on Independence Day.

This will be the first time that Vail has been called on to face the Quaker City group of former unsanctioned pilots, who grew up to fame as daring speedsters without the pale of the A. A. A. Now that they are within the fold, the meet on the Fourth should serve as a decided impetus to the auto race sport in the Philadelphia vicinity.

CUTTING DOWN THE INFUX

The effect of legislation during the last twenty years upon the number of immigrant arrivals is shown when comparison is made of the number admitted during the fiscal year 1907, when the total reached 1,285,349, with arrivals during the last fiscal year, which were 304,488.

Immigration officials have ways of knowing that with unrestricted immigration there would have been increased immigration since 1907. Harry E. Hull, commissioner general of immigration, speaks of millions of aliens who have been excluded from this country by immigration laws in recent years. But he observes:

"We conclude from these immigration figures that even under the present restrictive and selective immigration laws, aliens are not discouraged from seeking admission to this country, or from subsequently availing themselves of the privileges of naturalization."

For the safety of the newcomer as well as for the native American the country had to limit the number seeking employment and opportunity here. Without the help of restrictive laws the nation could not have maintained its fortunate labor mean.

Recognizing the vital need for a high order of citizenship, the American people welcome to their shores all who qualify and turn away the unqualified for the good of all concerned. The primary purpose of selective immigration is to guarantee future American citizens of a high type. The primary purpose of limited immigration is to protect native labor and preserve economic stability.

GOOD OLD SUMMER

What is the best season of the year? Summer, to most people—though the other seasons, especially spring, have their charms. And the older you get, the more you will like summer, the more you will dread winter.

Spring corresponds to our babyhood. It is the sprouting season, full of hope, dreams, uncertainty, danger of frost.

Autumn is like the waning years of life, when we harvest as we have sown, when we suffer for our negligence and mistakes and are rewarded for our effort. Most of us, when we look backward in the autumn of life, say: "If I only had my life to live over again..."

Winter, of course, corresponds to human death, the hibernating of old growth until new growth is ready to sprout and bud.

All three of these seasons are preparatory to or the aftermath of summer. And summer is the period of LIFE—of accomplishment—symbolic of the lives we are living. Lucky are you who have survived the frosts of life's springtime. Your crop of success is started. Toil and weed, for autumn of life will be upon you before you are aware. For results, it's now or never.

Next to money the hardest thing to keep is a secret.

A pedestrian should always have himself under control.

Famous last words: "I believe that's his left headlight burning."

Size means little. The few men who boss their households average about 114 pounds.

Echoes of the Past

 Items of Interest as Gleaned from old files of
 Bucks County Newspapers

The Newtown Enterprise dated June 11, 1892, says that at the 50th annual meeting of the Farmers' and Mechanics' Mutual Insurance Association of Bucks county, often called the Buckingham Company, held at Righter's Hotel, Buckingham, the following officers were elected: President, Hugh B. Eastburn; secretary, Jacob B. Krewson; treasurer, John S. Williams; directors, Joseph S. Atkinson, Henry Watson, Daniel Gotwals, Richard H. Janney and Ashbel W. Watson; surveyors, William Robinson, Isaac Van Horn, Robert Eastburn, John J. Spencer, and John K. Scarborough. Hugh B. Eastburn was elected in place of Benjamin S. Rich, and Ashbel W. Watson in place of Samuel T. Buckman, both of whom declined a re-election. Benjamin S. Rich had served in one or the other of the principal offices for half a century, having been its secretary for 44 years. It is worthy of note that not one of the gentlemen here mentioned is living after the lapse of 35 years.

At the annual meeting of the Lahaska Fire Insurance Company, held at the Lahaska Hotel, H. C. Worstall, of Newtown, president, and these were elected directors: Henry Lear, Watson P. Paxson, R. R. Paxson, Alfred H. Barber, H. C. Worstall, Eastburn Reeder, and Watson Kenderline. These organized by electing Henry Lear, president; Alfred H. Barber, vice president, and R. R. Paxson, secretary and treasurer. H. C. Worstall is the only survivor of those who figured in this annual.

One of the most prominent social events of the season was the wedding at "Mount Vernon," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Camm, in Northampton, on Tuesday, June 7, of Isaac T. Vanartsdalen, of Newtown township, and Miss Addie C. Camm. John Blackman was the groom's best man, while the bride was given away in his usual polite manner by her father, Miss Emma Camm, of Northampton, was the bridemaid, while Miss Louella Collier, of Brooklyn, acted as maid of honor. Joseph Camm, Jr., of Northampton, and Eddie Siddle, of Bridgeville, Del., were the ushers. The presents were numerous and varied, and about 100 guests attended. Rev. John Hart, of Neeshanic, N. J., performed the ceremony. The bridal tour was to New York and the White Mountains.

Pomona Grange, No. 22, P. of H., of Bucks and Philadelphia counties, held its quarterly meeting at Wrightstown, Thursday, June 9. Hampton W. Rice was worthy master. J. Randall Hibbs and wife provided a dinner. Participants were W. Rodman Paxson, address; Clara Buckman, M. Ida K. Kirk, Dr. Harrison Smith, George C. Buckman, John Kirkbride, Emma L. Rice, Joseph C. Watson, Alfred Paschall, George Janney, Watson Tomlinson, Jr., George Buckman, Washington Row John Wildman, John Buckman, Edward Ivins, Mary H. Rice, Kate Paxson, Eva Preston, John C. Rich, and others.

The farm of the late Elihu Parsons, in Morrisville, containing about 40 acres, had been sold by the executors, to William Burgess, consul at Tunstall, England, for about $400 an acre. The William H. Moon Company, had purchased a part of the Mary H. Burgess farm, in Lower Makefield, and were going to convert it into a nursery. The farm of Charles G. Knight, in Northampton township, at Holland station, containing 86 acres, had been purchased by Kennedy Crossan, a railroad contractor, of Fox Chase, for $150 per acre.

The proceeds of a festival held by the Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. Church, in Newtown Hall, the previous Saturday night, amounted to about $95.

The Bristol turnpike was made free from toll to the township line. The price paid by the city was $20,000.

CHAPTER I

The darting quicksilver loveliness of Mary!

"Thirty Love!"

A quick scurry of white slipped feet, a swoop upon the ball before it touched the sun-hardened ground, and over the net the white sphere sailed with the grace of a bird.

Oh, the beauty of Mary with the sun coaxing forth dizzying sparks from her flaming head as she whirled and darted and leaped. A red-headed medallion flapper playing tennis at Camelot, with Lancelot in the minute person of Bob astride a broomstick. The small heart of Bob filled to bursting with the pride of possession of Mary—too large a load for small Bob. What suecer in drenching the end of the broomstick till it shot from his moist grasp? What mitigation of the load in straddling fiercely the somewhat grimy white charger and galloping madly in place? Young Robert longed for ease. Young Robert wished passionately to transfer a portion of the load that filled his heart to bursting. Young Robert was commanded to "Sit quiet there you jumping deer or I'll sock yuh!" and the overcharged dam burst.

"She's my sister."

"Yeh?" Mild interest. "Which one?"

"The red-headed one," said young Robert, and his honest blue eyes shone. "The red-headed one's my sister." Words rushing out with the eagerness of long restriction.

"The one with the red hair you can see is my sister, Mister, because you can see I got red hair. We all

"I never catch it, I never—" "Well, but this time, Young Robert!"

Nemeses in the glowing person of Mary with racket under her arm. "Bob, I heard you! Oh, Robert, why do you talk so much? You're a little talkative girl, that's what you are, young Robert, and tonight I shall tell Dave all."

Dramatically. "Do you hear? All!" The long young man stood with arms folded and thought. "She is beautiful, but I doubt that she knows it. I like the way her hair swings against her cheeks and the straight cut across her forehead. Green eyes. They seem to swim. Beautiful mouth. Tan and freckles. Elaine, the lily-maid of Astolat!"

The young man grinned. "Are you laughing at Robert?" Mary turned her eyes to the tall young man. "Has he related the family history to you? And if he hasn't, how old is your friend-ship?"

"Not as old as I intend to make it, and he has told me nothing that I might not have heard by you."

"Well," Mary dismissed that topic with a shrug. "He will talk, I suppose. Robert, I won't!" Young Robert kicked himself free from her grasp. "Mary, I gotta introduce my friend. Permit me to introduce my friend," and waited courteously for his friend to contribute his name.

The long young man held out his hand. "I'm delighted to meet the tennis champion of Garden City, Miss Sullivan. My name is Wally Mason."

Mary smiled ruefully as she placed her hand in his. "Just how conventional is this, Mr. Mason?"

"Just how conventional is this, Mr. Mason?"

got red hair, even my brother Dave's got red hair because my Dad had red hair and my grand-dad had—"

"Yeh, I know, kid. Your grand-dad had red hair," drily.

Young Robert beamed. "How'd you know?" whereat the long youth ducked Robert's head in the sand and laughed. "You're good kid. What's your name, son?"

"Bob Sullivan, only today I'm Lancelot, and Mary's Elaine because she's tanned."

Nice teeth this long youth revealed when he threw his head back and laughed. "Whaddeyeman, kid—Elaine because she's tanned."

Young Robert ceased clutching the white charger and burrowed close to the stranger's side while he gazed out upon the hills of his vision tipped with purple and majesty and gold and mouthed the words as though partaking of their beauty before giving them over. "You know—Elaine the fair, Elaine the lovable, Elaine—the lily-maid of Astolat!"

The long youth put his arm about young Robert's shoulders and held him tightly, then tousled his red head. "Come back, son! Elaine's walking away with the game!"

Young Robert resumed his seat upon the white charger and shouted, "Ho, ho!" as he galloped madly. The beautiful clipped perfection of Mary's strokes, the leap of her body at the ball overhead, the swoops, the swirls, the darts and light, scurrying feet—That's my sister Mary," shouted Bob to the rows of interested parents and variegated relatives, and they smiled in amusement at the pride of possession shining on the face of this young male.

Hearty applause greeted the end of the game. It had been a good set and the players had been well matched, although the red-headed girl did seem to walk away with it. Well—they had heard about this Sullivan girl. "Playground champion of the city, isn't she, Betty?"

"Yes, Mother, she is, and she's a marvel, too, everyone says, and now winning this game from Emily Bill puts her in the champion class. Isn't she beautiful, Mother?"

"Well—beautiful—well, now, if you like the type—"

"She's a lovely type and she's my sister!" Thus young Robert, while the long young man laughed and pulled him away. "I see 'Elaine' coming and by the light in her eye you're going to catch it, son!"

"What does it matter, Miss Sullivan, when your eyes are green, and green eyes in all the world of eyes are my favorites?"

"Interesting," murmured Mary, and both laughed.

She walks delightfully, he thought. He attributed it, the swing from the hips, the lift of it, to the years of tennis probably. As a matter of fact, it was rather more than that. The lift of Mary's soul that stood on tiptoe. This desire within her to walk the tops of mountains. Mountains that touched the clouds. To live in the soul's high places, that was the urge within her. "My life will be beautiful," sang Mary, and it will make it beautiful. It will be a matter of heights—loftiness—beautiful spaces under the blue heavens, where other kindred spirits such as I have walked. I will have nothing to do with the valleys of despair. I will have nothing to do with the chasms in which sorrow lies buried."

Nights with the moon washing in through the window. Mary lay awake to hear the message whispered to her by the silent flood. "You Mary," it rippled and sang. "You Mary! What will you do with life? For it must be, what will you do with life, Mary, and not what will life do with you. You must never permit that, Mary. Never permit it the upper hand, or it will softly beat you and down you till you are a mass of nothingness without even the capacity for suffering. Think of lacking the capacity to suffer, Mary."

"No, no! I shall rise above everything."

Steadfast stream of ghostly light injecting strength into her quicksilver body.

You remember your mother, Mary?

Her mother. Palled little mother with the life beaten from her. Beaten from her with whips. You shall not enjoy your rightful heritage of happiness. You shall not be beaten and downed and scourged only to rise again. "You were rather wonderful, Mother." She had said that to her, whispered it from between pallid lips on that last day. Why hadn't she waited until Mary could have helped? Why had she gone? That pain beneath Mary's left breast that ate and gnawed "Oh, mother! You were so brave. But I shan't ever let life get a chance at me, mother, never, never I shan't!"

BUY IN BRISTOL!

A DOLLAR SPENT IN BRISTOL IS WORTH TWO SPENT ELSEWHERE BECAUSE IT IS REINVESTED BY LOCAL PEOPLE IN LOCAL ENTERPRISES AND HELPS TO PAY FOR LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS

Did you ever really give the subject of the local merchant and you any serious thought?

Perhaps you are a loyal citizen and patronize local shops and stores as a matter of loyalty, but as this is not a lecture it will do no harm to read this, anyhow.

Your local merchant is first a citizen, a resident of your community the same as you are.

He lives in your community, pays taxes along with you for the upkeep and improvement of your community; he raises his family and sends his children to school—schools which he helps, with you, to maintain.

If he is a butcher, he buys clothes and shoes for his family from a fellow-merchant. No matter what his line of business, he spends money with other business men of the community.

He banks in local banks; he takes his family of an evening to the local shows.

Summed up, the money he makes in the community is spent in it.

Were it not for your local merchant, there would be no schools, no paved streets, no public buildings, no progress nor prosperity. He is here day in and day out, rain or shine, giving his time and energy and money to whatever will benefit the district, taking part in the administrations of the community or aiding to regulate the administration for the best interests of the community by his vote.

HE IS A CITIZEN—

Is he not entitled, then, to consideration?

But there is something more than a call for your loyalty to him as citizen to citizen—neighbor to neighbor.

Living here as he does, he comes to know his customers. They are to him not "just customers," but "fellow citizens," "good neighbors." As he will be here tomorrow and the next day and next year, meeting his customers face to face, day after day, his business gets his personal attention—every transaction is a personal dealing between him and the patron.

He is your neighbor—your fellow citizen, building for tomorrow and next year, and fully cognizant that the only way to build is to sell good goods at right prices.

Your local merchant is in himself a guarantee of his goods and prices and services because he is always at the same stand meeting largely the same customers.

He cannot exist upon the patronage of transients—his livelihood comes from permanent residents; his aim is to make permanent residents regular customers. He must do this—hence his wares, his prices and his service are all and always arranged and held to this end.

You never heard your live-wire, wide-awake home merchant say, "Oh, well, one customer more or less makes no difference." Every customer, to him, is important; a new customer is eagerly sought, and a customer less—well, your local merchant will not let it happen if anything just and reasonable under the sun will prevent such a thing happening.

So not alone out of a sense of loyalty to your community, but for your own sake—for the sake of your purse and the satisfaction of being given personal attention and service—buy of our home merchants.

Alice Terry, the beautiful blonde star of many previous Ingram pictures has the leading feminine part in "The Magician" and is the only American player of note in the cast.

Paul Wegener, the German screen and stage star, who will best be re-

An easy triumph of wifhood

YOU are a wife. You must be a nurse, a home decorator, a domestic scientist, a seamstress, a laundress, a beauty specialist, a bureau of information, a buyer, a banker, a hostess. You must be all these professionals almost every day, yet you must not be tired at dinner. It must be a good dinner. You must have good news. And you must not only keep up your professions, but grow wiser in them each day.

Sounds hard, but is it? Not if you use your daily university—the advertisements. For here are the best safety-firsts; the most beautiful, most lasting draperies and home furnishings, and how to arrange them best; new food or new delicious ways of preparing and serving known foods; the finest in dress, in cold creams, hair washes, manicure methods; news of insurance; thrifty buying; happier ways to entertain; something of business, literature, art, music—of almost every science known.

The information in advertisements is latest and correct. Yet a brief glance is sufficient to give you their news. Just a daily reading of the advertisements—and there's an easy triumph of wifhood! In selecting, buying, arranging, using. In keeping fresh for dinner. Saving work, saving time, saving money—being wise!

Reading advertisements regularly means keeping to the fore.
Read these, here, today.
